"MY MIND'S UNSOUND LIKE SICKLES", WHO SHOT KEYES, HARRY THAW TELLS JEROME

White's Slayer Gives Lawyer Quick Answer When Called for Mental Test.

WON'T TELL OF KILLING.

Words "Kill, Kill, Kill" in Kennedy Letter, He Says, Are a Forgery.

(Special to The Evening World.)

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 25.—Harry Thaw was on the stand for the first time today in the proceedings on which the slayer of Stanford White hopes to secure his liberty from the Matteawan Insane Asylum. He had been called to the stand before for the purpose of identifying certain papers, but he was called today to undergo the examination as to his mental condition at the hands of William Travers Jerome, the man who placed him in the asylum.

When his name was called Thaw rose from his seat between his mother and his sister, Alice, former Countess of Yarmouth, and walked slowly to the stand. Then he sat and stared steadily ahead. His attitude toward his prosecutor was defiant. He answered in short jerky tones the questions of Mr. Jerome. He made objection to the attorney's method of examination and demanded to know if he were on the stand as Mr. Jerome's witness.

"You know why you are on the stand," exclaimed Jerome. "You are there to be examined as to your mental condition."

Thaw took exception to Mr. Jerome's frequent use of the expression "Noblesse oblige." He was hostile after this. He looked away from Jerome while the latter was questioning him, but looked straight at him while answering him.

Bitter objection was made by Mr. Shearn when, after the noon recess, Mr. Jerome asked the witness to give his recollections of the night of his killing of Stanford White.

HIS MIND LIKE GEN. SICKLES, WHO SHOT KEYES.

Thaw also objected, but Mr. Jerome insisted that this was an examination as to the prisoner's mental condition and Justice Keogh decided. Thaw was not sure that he could tell all the facts, but he told a lot.

"Where you of unsound mind when you shot Stanford White?" was one of the queries put to him by Jerome.

"I was in the same condition of mind as was General Sickles when he killed Keyes."

"You heard Evelyn say that you had hidden behind her skirts for years?"

"I did."

Shearn told him in July, 1908, of her slaying and it was not until June 25, 1908, six years ago today, that she killed White.

Shearn made another outburst against Jerome for bringing in the anniversary of the shooting and asked him if he had waited until this day to put Thaw on the stand.

Mr. Jerome said that he could not see any analogy between Sickles and Thaw, further than both shot men who dis-

AMERICAN BARONESS LATE OF WASHINGTON SUICIDE IN LONDON

BARONESS DE REINACH-WERTH FORMERLY DIANE MORGAN-HILL

WOMAN LYNCHED BY GEORGIA MOB AT MURDER SCENE

Negress, Who Killed Planter's Wife, Taken From Officers and Hanged.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 25.—Ann Boston, the negro woman who stabbed and killed Mrs. R. E. Jordan, wife of a prominent planter at Pinehurst, Ga., yesterday afternoon, and who was later taken from officers at Cordale by a mob, was lynched early this morning.

After taking the woman from the officers, members of the mob put her in an automobile and set out for Pinehurst. Reaching there, they hanged her to a tree.

The woman had been rushed to Cordale for safe keeping, but a mob of residents of Pinehurst and Vienna overpowered the Sheriff at 10:30 o'clock last night, took the woman from him and, placing her in an automobile, dashed away at a speed of fifty miles an hour.

The negro murdered Mrs. Jordan because of a rapinandum due to neglect of household duties.

Mrs. Jordan was about thirty years old and considered one of the handsomest women in Southern Georgia. The Boston woman was her cook. When reprimanded the negress seized a knife and slashed Mrs. Jordan until she fell dead. The negress fled, but was captured some miles away.

AMERICAN BRIDE OF BARON LEAPS TO DEATH IN LONDON

Baroness De Reinach-Werth, Former Miss Morgan-Hill of Washington, Was Ill.

WED AFTER ROMANCE.

Met Her Husband When He Was Army Officer But Marriage Was Long Delayed.

LONDON, June 25.—Baroness de Reinach-Werth, whose maiden name was Diane Morgan-Hill of Washington, where she was married on Dec. 5 last, committed suicide on June 21 by jumping from the window of a nursing home near Regent's Park. She had been suffering from hysteria.

While her nurse was at the other end of the room the Baroness rushed to the window and threw herself out. She fell on the stones, eighteen feet below, and fractured her skull.

At the coroner's inquest to-day the jury returned a verdict of suicide while temporarily insane.

The marriage of Miss Diane Morgan-Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Morgan-Hill of Washington, one of the wealthiest and most beautiful girls in Washington society, to Baron Rodolphe de Reinach-Werth, was the cause of considerable comment last December, inasmuch as it was marked by more romance than usually attends the wedding of titles by American girls.

According to the story told at the time, Miss Morgan-Hill met her future husband seven years before she married him, while she was stopping at Dinard, in France, near which place the Baron's regiment, the Thirtieth Hussars, were stationed. The Baron became infatuated with her, threw up his commission and came to America to court her. But the girl's parents would not permit them to marry, despite their daughter's obvious preference for him.

So the Baron went to Canada and later established a cattle ranch in Calgary, Alberta Province, in the meantime maintaining a steady correspondence with Miss Morgan-Hill. Some three years before they were finally married the society belle definitely pledged herself to him, it is said, and finally in the latter part of last year, her parents, seeing that her health, as well as her happiness, was at stake, gave their consent.

The wedding at St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Church was quiet, only members of the family being present. The Baron and Baroness left immediately for France, where they spent their honeymoon, intending to return to this country in the late spring. An intention, apparently, which they never fulfilled.

AUTOS RACE MADLY FOR CHAUFFEUR'S KIDNAPPED BRIDE

Banker Lushear Bundles His Daughter Into Fast Car From Lawyer's Office.

ELOPER CHASES AFTER.

Gasolene Lochinvar Romance Is Over Twenty-six-Mile Course From Newark.

Two sixty horse-power automobiles this afternoon thundered over the turnpike from Newark to Mount Tabor, N. J., one in hot pursuit of the other. Behind them were a string of other autos, panting and snorting to be in at the finish of a tremendous race.

It was a race for a bride. A cowering seventeen-year-old girl in the arms of her father crouched in the first car, a prisoner kidnapped from a lawyer's office in Newark. Conrad Eysoldt, a determined young man who used to be a chauffeur in the family of Banker Lushear, president of the North Ward National Bank of Newark, but who eloped with pretty and petite Dorothy Lushear two weeks ago, is at the throttle of the pursuing car.

Eysoldt swore that he will recover his bride, who was taken from him by a trick after their elopement had been discovered, if he has to tear the family roof tree off the banker's mansion at Mount Tabor.

This romance of love and automobiles and puffing gasoline smoke easily divides itself into chapters, thus:

PA-IN-LAW TRIES TO MAKE GOOD HIS THREAT.

There is a big gray touring car thrashing outside the Chancery Chambers, Newark, waiting for Papa-in-law Lushear, who says he is going to take his seventeen-year-old daughter Dorothy away from the sight of her husband, who was the former family chauffeur, Conrad Eysoldt. Beside the big gray car is a high-power black monster, kicking dust clouds behind as the exhaust roars defiance to pa-in-law's car. The big black fellow is Cupid's messenger, and at the call of the young bridegroom, who is going to take his bride by force if he needs be, says:

All day the two cars thrash side by side and there is no sign of the little wife who is locked in Attorney Parker's offices on the eighth floor and doesn't know her big husband is pacing up and down outside.

"If I can only see her even for an instant," he exclaims, "she will go with me."

Pa-in-law is President of the North Ward National Bank and too foxy for that, so the game waits.

Just two weeks ago Newark society was startled to hear of the elopement of Dorothy Lushear and Conrad Eysoldt. Down from the Lushear family mansion at Mount Tabor had rushed the modern Lochinvar in Papa's very best auto, and beside him sat Dorothy.

They hustled over to New York City and were married by Alderman James C. Smith. Then they returned to Newark to the Hotel Navarre.

That night excited messengers from the banker's home demanded the chauffeur to give up his bride. He refused and declared his right, as the law in New Jersey says a girl may marry whoever she chooses after she is sixteen years old. Besides, Dorothy clung to her husband and declared she would never, never desert him, family or no family.

The next day the bride's brother Herbert, who is only twenty-four years old himself and who eloped with the family maid when he was nineteen, came to see the honeymooners. He persuaded them to go to Mount Tabor, if only for an hour, as Mamma-in-law was hysterical with grief. They went, saw Mrs. Lushear and waited several hours, when the banker entered.

Mr. Lushear stormed at the chauffeur, who said nothing. He raved at his daughter, who fled to her husband's side and said any woman never leave him. Then Papa-in-law Lushear, according to the bridegroom, drew a revolver and threatened to kill him. Dorothy rushed before the gun and said she would die too. After a lively scene the

MURPHY, THE HAND OF RYAN, BRYAN TO EVENING WORLD

No Such Spectacle in American History as the Financial Interests Trying to Control Conventions of Both Parties.

BY WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.
(Special to The Evening World.)
(Copyright, 1912, by Virgil V. McNeill.)

BALTIMORE, June 25.—Now that the delegates are learning that Murphy is but the heavy hand of Ryan they are thinking of what their constituents will say if this convention is delivered to the same financial interests that controlled the Chicago convention through Root and his machine.

It is a spectacle never before witnessed in American politics, two conventions of opposing parties meeting within two weeks and the same financial jugglers of Wall street attempting to use the convention like the wooden figures in a Punch and Judy show.

If they can succeed in deceiving the delegates who have come here under the impression that the Democratic party was expected to make an honest fight against the Republican party it will be the miracle of modern times.

NEW YORKER WINS IN BIG AUTO RACE MARKED BY DEATH

Bruce-Brown Leads First Run for Grand Prix in France—Two Persons Killed.

DIEPPE, France, June 25.—David Bruce-Brown of New York won the first half of the automobile grand prix which started here at dawn today. He was, however, not representing the United States, but was driving an Italian P. I. A. T. machine. He completed the ten laps to distance of 160 kilometers or about 100 miles in 54 minutes and 44 seconds, his average speed being 17.4 miles an hour.

Hollet, driving a French Leon Peugeot machine, was second, only about two minutes behind, his time being 56 minutes and 44 seconds.

PARKER GETS 73 VOTES MORE THAN BRYAN FOR TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN

The Colonel in Forty-Minute Speech Denounced the Ryans and Belmonts for Attempting to Control the Democratic Party.

BIG ARMORY IN UPROAR DURING THE ROLL CALL

Judge Parker Starts Speech, but There Is So Much Disorder, Convention Adjourns Till 8 To-Night.

BY MARTIN GREEN
(Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)

CONVENTION HALL, BALTIMORE, Md., June 25.—William Jennings Bryan failed in his attempt to control the temporary organization of the Democratic Convention this afternoon. Judge Alton B. Parker polled 579 votes, while Bryan got 506. He is still a great power in the convention. There were four votes for Senator O'Gorman. The vote was:

(A)—One vote for Kern.
(B)—One absent or not voting.
(C)—Four for O'Gorman.

Senator Luke Lea of Tennessee moved the nomination be made unanimous. The motion prevailed and Judge Parker was escorted to the platform by Senator Lea, Senator Stone of Missouri and Judge Hudspeeth of New Jersey.

Judge Parker began his speech and the audience, which was tired and restive, began to leave the hall. An adjournment was taken until 8 o'clock to-night, and Judge Parker will then complete his speech.

Bryan opened the hostilities with a strong attack on Judge Alton B. Parker, the choice of the National Committee for Temporary Chairman. Mr. Bryan in an effort to defeat Judge Parker placed in nomination Senator John W. Kern of Indiana, the Democratic candidate for Vice-President four years ago.

ATTACKS RYANS AND BELMONT.

Those who were looking for a cross of gold crown of thorns passage had their expectations partially realized when Mr. Bryan announced that he hoped the Democratic party would show it could not be frightened by the Ryans or bought by the Belmonts. An impressive feature of the speech was Mr. Bryan's assertion that the Wall street interests back of Judge Parker were working to have the Judge kill a progressive campaign at the start with a paralyzing speech.

The speech was emphatic, and some sort of signal must have been given, for from the galleries arose cries of men. Mr. Bryan was seriously
